

Grant Opportunities & News You Can Use

Hello faculty,

This newsletter features the Renaissance Society of America, which has recently overhauled its granting process. It offers over 30 grants to scholars studying the era between 1300-1700.

Sage Advice looks at peer review, from the perspective of both applicants and reviewers, who might use the experience as a learning exercise.

News may be found on page four with details about the upcoming NSF Grants Conference in New Orleans. Our profiles of opportunities, most due in early November, follow.

Beginning on page twelve, we list all deadlines through February, grouped by discipline.

For deadlines throughout the year, see the Grants Calendar, perpetually in progress, on the Barnard website at External Grant Opportunities. You can download a copy of your very own to sort, search, and filter at will.

If you would like assistance in finding grants for an upcoming project or would like to begin an application process, please contact Kari Steeves. As always, feel free to send any comments, requests, or suggestions to us here.

Renaissance Society of America

The RSA recently overhauled its funding structure, so we thought now would be a good time to feature them. "The Renaissance Society of America is the largest international learned society devoted to the study of the era 1300–1700.... Members identify with one or more disciplinary groups. The number of these groups has grown over the years, reflecting the field's vibrancy and diversity. They are Americas, Art and Architecture, Book History, Classical Tradition, Comparative Literature, Digital Humanities, Emblems, English Literature, French Literature, Germanic Literature, Hebraica, Hispanic Literature, History, Humanism, Islamic World, Italian Literature, Legal and Political Thought, Medicine and Science, Music, Neo-Latin Literature, Performing Arts and Theater, Philosophy, Religion, Rhetoric, Women and Gender."

"The Society awards a number of competitive fellowships to members each year supporting individual research projects and publications that advance scholarly knowledge about the period 1300-1700. The purpose of the fellowships, both residential and non-residential, is to support members who need to travel to archives, libraries, and historic sites to conduct short-term research (usually 1–2 months), and then to publish their results for the scholarly community and the general public." The deadline for all applications is September 15, 2018.

The RSA supports residential fellowships in all disciplines and short-term research library fellowships for art historians:

- The RSA–Bodleian Library Fellowship, Oxford University, UK,
- The RSA–Patricia H. Labalme Fellowship, Centro Vittore Branca at Fondazione Giorgio Cini, Venice, Italy
- The RSA–Centre for Reformation and Renaissance Studies (CRRS) Fellowship, Toronto, Ontario, Canada
- The RSA–Folger, Folger Shakespeare Library, Washington, DC
- The RSA–Newberry Fellowship, Newberry Library, Chicago, IL
- The RSA–Huntington Fellowship, Huntington Library, San Marino, CA

Art historians also have the further options of the following short-term research library fellowships:

- The RSA–Kress New York Public Library Fellowship
- The RSA–Kress Beinecke Library Fellowship, Beinecke Rare Book & Manuscript Library, Yale University, CT
- The RSA–Kress UCLA Library Fellowship, University of California Los Angeles, Special Collections, Los Angeles, CA

In addition, "The Renaissance Society of America will award up to thirteen RSA research fellowships in amounts of $3,000 for research travel. All applicants for a Short-Term Research Fellowship are automatically considered for the Kristeller Fellowship, and may indicate if they also wish to be considered for the Palisca and Pedretti Fellowships, if eligible."

- Paul Oskar Kristeller Fellowship in all subjects
- RSA Short-Term Research Fellowship in all subjects. These are usually divided evenly between Senior, Junior, and Non-doctoral scholars.
- Claude V. Palisca Fellowship in Musicology
- The Pedretti Fellowship in Leonardo da Vinci Studies "

Art Historians may also apply for "up to five Samuel H. Kress Mid-Career Research and Publication Fellowships of $3,000 each. These fellowships are intended especially to support the costs of publication in the history of art, but in some cases may be awarded for research travel costs for art history projects."

For more information, please see the Society's newly organized Fellowships page.

Sage Advice for Competitive Proposals

Barnard's own Sponsored Research Manager, Pamela Tuffley, is currently pursuing a graduate degree in Research Administration at Johns Hopkins University. (We're all very proud here in Institutional Funding and Sponsored Research.) This installment of Sage Advice digs into her prodigious and aptly titled textbook, Research Administration and Management, for insights into the peer review process.

Generally, "peer reviewer" means someone with expertise relevant to the parameters of the request for proposal. Pamela E. Miller, Ph.D., the author on the chapter on "Peer Review and Project Implementation and Evaluation," states that "the agency tries to find panelists within the same or related scientific discipline that have had peer-reviewed journal and book publications as well as external funding from recognized private or governmental funding agencies. Often a funding agency chooses reviewers whom the agency has supported with grant or contract funds in the past."

Miller refers to research conducted by the text book editors, Elliot C. Kulakowski, Ph.D., FAHA, and Lynne U. Chronister, MPA, to warn that, "biases do occur." "The peer review process is often unduly affected by biases for or against specific theoretical frameworks, methodologies, investigators, and institutions." Some agencies, including the National Science Foundation, try to offset the danger of bias by allowing applicants to list reviewers they would prefer not review their proposals. Otherwise, the "applicant can only hope that the other peer reviewers will counteract any unwarranted negative review.... Ultimately, the best defense is a good offense: in short, write a good proposal!" Easier said than done. See Sage Advice in past newsletters for tips on how to plan, write, and not bungle a proposal.

The author offers a pointer: "Under the federal Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), many agencies will provide novice applicants with copies of successful proposals to be used as a guide (not to be copied verbatim) that illustrate the agency's proposal criteria."

She also advises scholars to sit on peer-review panels themselves to improve their grant-writing skills, and she spends some time discussing how to go about securing such an invitation. "The question of how to get noticed, if one is a researcher, has one good answer: publish, publish, and publish! Another good answer is to present papers at professional conferences where you work is likely to be noticed by program officers in attendance." Conversely, "go to other conference sessions, especially those that indicate that the research was funded by an external agency. The presenter is likely to be a peer reviewer, and there maybe an agency representative in the audience. Pay attention to what is presented and ask interesting questions! "

Perhaps stating the obvious, Miller also suggests, "if a program officer or an agency representative wants to talk about your research, make yourself available!" (I realize that's the fourth exclamation point I've quoted. The author appears to have a fondness for them—unusual for a textbook, wouldn't you say?) Miller even goes so far as to suggest that researchers "monitor the Federal Register for opportunities to comment on proposed agency guidelines.... Submission of well-thought-out suggestions can give your name recognition."

News from the NSF

The Next NSF Grants Conference will be held November 8-9, 2018, in New Orleans, LA.

Registration will open Thursday, September 6th at 12:00 PM EST.

For additional details and to sign up to receive information about this conference and other events, visit the Grants Conference website.

Key officials representing each NSF program directorate, administrative office, Office of the General Counsel and Office of the Inspector General will participate in the two-day conference. The conference is designed for new faculty, researchers, educators and administrators who want to gain insight into a wide range of important and timely issues at NSF including: the state of current funding; the proposal and award process; and current and recently updated policies and procedures.

Topics will include:

- An introduction to NSF;
- NSF's proposal preparation and merit review process;
- Award management;
- Conflict of interest policies;
- New programs and initiatives;
- Cross-disciplinary and special interest programs; and
- Breakout sessions by discipline.

NSF's Promising Practices – an update on NSF's February notice regarding Harassment-Free Research Workplaces

NSF's Promising Practices portal “will serve as a living resource for the community to utilize in bolstering anti-harassment policies and practices at NSF-funded organizations. This resource houses a collection of standards of behaviors tailored to field sites, facilities, ships, and conferences. It also provides a collection of federal definitions, reporting practices, organizational responses to reporting, and other practices that were established to improve climate and culture. NSF welcomes feedback from the community on this portal; feedback, suggestion for practices, and other comments may be submitted via NSF's Harassment Portal Feedback Form.”

From NIH eSubmission Items of Interest - July 31, 2018:

“Where Do I Put the [Application] Information I Know [NIH and Reviewers] Want, But Didn't Ask For?”

You want to give staff and reviewers ALL the information you think they need to provide a thorough review of your proposal. There is certainly nothing wrong with that - right? Well, actually it depends. The application guide and funding opportunity announcement provide very specific guidance on what to include in your application and, in some cases, there are page limits you must stay within to convey the requested information.

If you have information that doesn't fit in page-limited attachments like your Specific Aims and Research Strategy, rework those attachments until you tell the best story possible within the confines of the page limits. Do not try to stuff that extra information into other non-limited fields of the application forms. Similarly, if you have information that doesn't have a “natural home” based on our instructions, don't include it. There are several form fields with tempting names like “Appendix,” “Other Attachments,” “Other Requested Information,” and “Other Clinical Trial-related Attachments.” DO NOT use those fields unless requested to do so in the application guide or announcement.

Why not? Even if you have the best of intentions, you need to resist the temptation to force fit information into your application where it doesn't belong. The page limits and guidance are there for fairness and you may find your application pulled from consideration if you try to get around them (NOT-OD-11-080).”

News and Grant Opportunities

“The Duplication Balancing Act [between the Research Strategy attachment and the PHS Human Subjects and Clinical Trials Information form]

The application guide statement “do not duplicate information between the Research Strategy attachment and the PHS Human Subjects and Clinical Trials Information form” appears to be causing some angst in the community. In fact, our new human subjects form invites a certain amount of overlap between the sections. It would be difficult, for example, to provide a “Brief Summary” of a protocol without talking about information captured elsewhere in the application. The point we were actually trying to make is that we don’t want you to copy and paste blocks of text into multiple places in your application. Your Specific Aims and Research Strategy should include enough human subjects and clinical trial information to tell a cohesive and complete story. The human subjects form is meant to provide structured, supporting details for the study (sorry, it isn’t just extra space to expound on the research strategy). The Brief Summary in the Protocol Synopsis section of the human subjects form aligns with what the public would see in ClinicalTrials.gov without the benefit of the full application. It should hit the key points at a very high level in as close to plain language as possible. The bottom line is there will be some overlap of information within your application, but reviewers should not be reading blocks of text copied verbatim into multiple sections of the application.”

Grant Opportunities

GENERAL INTEREST AND CROSS DISCIPLINARY

William T. Grant Foundation Institutional Challenge Grants

Deadline: September 17, 2018

“The award supports research institutions to build sustained research-practice partnerships with public agencies or nonprofit organizations in order to reduce inequality in youth outcomes. Research institutions will need to address four important goals:

- Build a sustained institutional partnership with a public agency or nonprofit organization that serves young people in the United States.
- Pursue a joint research agenda to reduce inequality in youth outcomes.
- Create institutional change to value the partnership and its work.
- Develop the capacity of the partners to collaborate and use research evidence.”

Google Faculty Research Award

Deadline: September 30, 2018

“While we do significant in-house research and engineering, we also maintain strong ties with academic institutions worldwide pursuing innovative research in core areas relevant to our products and services. As part of that vision, the Google Faculty Research Awards Program aims to recognize and support world-class, permanent faculty pursuing cutting-edge research in areas of mutual interest. Our goal is to identify and strengthen long-term collaborative relationships with faculty working on problems that will impact how future generations use technology. Google Faculty Research Awards are structured as seed funding to support one graduate student for one year and are awarded as an unrestricted gift.”

competitive grant program; we receive many more applications than we are able to fund."

National Geographic has several requests for proposals:

- Documenting Human Migrations
- Uncovering Human Origins in Asia and Africa
- Species Recovery
- Big Cats Conservation
- Making the Case for Nature
- Reducing Marine Plastic Pollution
- Participatory Science
- Conservation Technologies
- AI for Earth

We also encourage diverse kinds of philosophical research ranging from the highly abstract to the highly applied." <<more>>

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Archaeological Institute

Deadline: November 1, 2018

The Archaeological Institute has a number of opportunities coming due at the beginning of November. Some give preference to early career researchers, so be sure to click through to the specific listing for eligibility details.

- "Julie Herzig Desnick Endowment Fund for Archaeological Field Surveys

The Herzig Desnick Fund will provide grants specifically dedicated to exploratory archaeological field surveys, especially for early stage work.

- Richard C. MacDonald Iliad Endowment for Archaeological Research

This grant will be awarded to projects that support research in regions that supply context to the study of Troy and generally help elucidate the Trojan War and its impact on ancient Mediterranean civilization. This can include but is not limited to Anatolia (modern Turkey), southeastern Europe, the Aegean and Crete during the third to first millennia B.C.E.

- Site Preservation Grant
The Site Preservation Program provides grants of up to $15,000 to support innovative projects that aid in the preservation of threatened archaeological sites.
- The Ellen and Charles Steinmetz Endowment Fund for Archaeology
The Steinmetz Fund will support innovative uses of technology in archaeological research.
- The Kathleen and David Boochever Endowment Fund for Fieldwork and Scientific Analyses
The Boochever Fund will support field and laboratory research.
- Harriet and Leon Pomerance Fellowship
To support a project relating to Aegean Bronze Age archaeology.
- Helen M. Woodruff Fellowship of the AIA and the American Academy in Rome
To support a Rome Prize Fellowship for the study of archaeology or classical studies every other year. (Next deadline will be in 2019)
- Olivia James Traveling Fellowship
For travel and study in Greece, Cyprus, the Aegean Islands, Sicily, southern Italy, Asia Minor, and Mesopotamia.
- The Archaeology of Portugal Fellowship
To support projects relating to the archaeology of Portugal
- Samuel H. Kress Grants for Research and Publication in Classical Art and Architecture
These grants fund publication preparation, or research leading to publication, undertaken by professional members of the AIA.
- The AIA Publication Subvention Program
This program offers subventions from the AIA's von Bothmer Publication Fund in support of new book-length publications in the field of Greek, Roman, and Etruscan archaeology and art history. “ <<more>>

Wenner Gren Foundation Post-Ph.D. Research Grants

Deadline: November 1, 2018, and May 1, 2019
"Post-Ph.D. Research Grants are awarded to individuals holding a Ph.D. or equivalent degree to support individual research projects. The program contributes to the Foundation's overall mission to support basic research in anthropology and to ensure that the discipline continues to be a source of vibrant and significant work that furthers our understanding of humanity's cultural and biological origins, development, and variation. The Foundation supports research that demonstrates a clear link to anthropological theory and debates, and promises to make a solid contribution to advancing these ideas. There is no preference for any methodology, research location, or subfield. The Foundation particularly welcomes proposals that employ a comparative perspective, can generate innovative approaches or ideas, and/or integrate two or more subfields." <<more>>

National Institutes of Health National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease Research Education Program (R25)

Deadline: Letters of Intent November 5, 2018;
Final submission December 5, 2018

"The NIH Research Education Program (R25) supports research education activities in the mission areas of the NIH. The over-arching goal of this National Institute of Allergy and infectious Diseases (NIAID) R25 program is to support educational activities that complement and/or enhance the training of a workforce to meet the nation's biomedical, behavioral and clinical research needs in NIAID mission areas. To accomplish the stated over-arching goal, this FOA will support creative educational activities with a primary focus on Courses for Skills Development, Research Experiences and Mentoring Activities related to NIAID's mission areas." <<more>>

National Science Foundation Postdoctoral Research Fellowships in Biology

Deadline: November 6, 2018

"The Directorate for Biological Sciences (BIO) awards Postdoctoral Research Fellowships in Biology to recent recipients of the doctoral degree for research and training in selected areas supported by BIO and with special goals for human resource development in biology. The fellowships encourage independence at an early stage of the research career to permit Fellows to pursue their research and training goals in the most appropriate research locations regardless of the availability of funding for the Fellows at that site.... The fellowships are also designed to provide active mentoring of the Fellows by the sponsoring scientists who will benefit from having these talented young scientists in their research groups. The research and training plan of each fellowship must address important scientific questions within the scope of the BIO Directorate and the specific guidelines in this fellowship program solicitation."

American Psychological Association Travel Grants for US Psychologists to Attend International Conferences

Deadline: November 15, 2018, and March 15, 2019

"This award will cover or partially cover conference registration fees at international conferences held outside the United States and Canada for U.S.-based psychologists.... APA and APAGS members are eligible to apply. A conference presentation is not required, although preference will be given according to the following criteria.

1. Significant contribution to the conference program (e.g., first author, symposium chair, roundtable moderator).

2. Have not attended an international conference in the past two years.
3. Early career or graduate student psychologist." <<more>>

National Science Foundation Ecology and Evolution of Infectious Diseases

Deadline: November 21, 2018

"The Ecology and Evolution of Infectious Diseases program supports research on the ecological, evolutionary, and socio-ecological principles and processes that influence the transmission dynamics of infectious diseases. The central theme of submitted projects must be quantitative or computational understanding of pathogen transmission dynamics. The intent is discovery of principles of infectious disease transmission and testing mathematical or computational models that elucidate infectious disease systems. Projects should be broad, interdisciplinary efforts that go beyond the scope of typical studies. They should focus on the determinants and interactions of transmission among humans, non-human animals, and/or plants. This includes, for example, the spread of pathogens; the influence of environmental factors such as climate; the population dynamics and genetics of reservoir species or hosts; the cultural, social, behavioral, and economic dimensions of disease transmission. Research may be on zoonotic, environmentally-borne, vector-borne, or enteric diseases of either terrestrial or freshwater systems and organisms, including diseases of animals and plants, at any scale from specific pathogens to inclusive environmental systems. Proposals for research on disease systems of public health concern to developing countries are strongly encouraged, as are disease systems of concern in agricultural systems." <<more>>

Oak Spring Garden Foundation Fellowships/ Library Opportunities

Deadline: rolling

"The Oak Spring Garden Library includes about 16,000 objects, including rare books, manuscripts and works of art relating to plants, gardens and landscapes, dating back to the 14th century.

Deadline Reminders (cont'd)

Beginning in January 2018 we are able to offer free overnight accommodation on the Oak Spring estate for bona fide scholars wishing to study material in the Oak Spring Garden Library collections. Since we are only able to accommodate a limited number of scholars at any given time, we will probably need to prioritize our visitors based on timing and topics." Currently, opportunities appear to include unfunded residencies on site and ideas for partnerships.
