

Grant Opportunities & News You Can Use

Hello, Barnard faculty,

More newsy News this month. See page four for some information on the reopening of federal funding agencies, which are now funded through February 15.

This edition’s featured funder looks at the Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC), which can connect researchers bitten by the travel bug to research centers throughout the world. For Sage Advice we return to Colorado State University’s blog series, “Principles of Effective Grantsmanship.”

This newsletter profiles opportunities coming due mostly in early April, not a flush month, especially for the social sciences. Alternatively, you can download the whole year’s Grants Calendar from the website and sort by due date, discipline, funder, or grant type.

Reminders for deadlines over the next six months can be found beginning on page eight, grouped by discipline.

Upcoming internal grant deadlines are March 8th and March 27th, the last of the academic year. See the Barnard website, here, for more information. If you have colleagues abroad whom you might like to bring to Barnard under the Weiss Fellowships for Visiting International Scholars Program, please see information here.

For assistance in finding grants for an upcoming project or to begin an application process, please contact Kari Steeves or any one of us in Institutional Funding and Sponsored Research. As always, feel free to send us comments, requests, or suggestions here.

Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC)

“Founded in 1981, the Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC) is a private nonprofit federation of independent overseas research centers (ORCs) that promote advanced research, particularly in the humanities and social sciences, with a focus on the conservation and recording of cultural heritage and the understanding and interpretation of modern societies.”

As such it disseminates Fellowships to the ORCs, which makes it a great place for one-stop shopping should you want to travel to any one or more of its member countries or regions. “Funding is awarded from sources including the U.S. Department of State, the U.S. Department of Education, and the Smithsonian Institution, as well as from private foundations and individuals.” The Centers include (with application deadlines in parenthesis):

- American Center for Mongolian Studies (February 15, 2019)
- American Center of Oriental Research in Jordan (February 1, 2019)
- American Institute for Indonesian Studies (January 7, 2019)
- American Institute for Maghrib Studies (January 31, 2019)
- American Institute for Yemeni Studies (February 12, 2019)
- American Institute of Indian Studies (July 1, 2019)
- American Institute of Pakistan Studies (February 1 and 15, 2019)
- American Research Center in Egypt (January 15, 2019)
- American Research Institute of the South Caucasus (January 18, 2019)
- American School of Classical Studies at Athens (January 15 and March 15, 2019)
- Americas Research Network in Mexico (April 1 and June 30, 2019)
- Center for Khmer Studies (February 28, 2019)
- Palestinian American Research Center (January 7, 14, and 16, 2019)
- W.F. Albright Institute of Archaeological Research in Jerusalem (January 15, 2019)
- West African Research Association (February 1, 2019)

See this nifty rollover chart for links to each grant.

CAORC also administers the National Endowment for the Humanities Senior Research Fellowship (January 24, 2019) that “supports advanced research in the humanities for U.S. postdoctoral scholars, and foreign national postdoctoral scholars who have been residents in the U.S. for three or more years.

Scholars must carry out research in a country which hosts a participating American overseas research center. Eligible countries for 2018-2019 are: Algeria, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Cambodia, Cyprus, Georgia, Indonesia, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Nepal, Senegal, Sri Lanka or Tunisia.” <<more>>

The Multi-Country Research Fellowship provides funding for “advanced regional or trans-regional research in the humanities, social sciences, or allied natural sciences for U.S. doctoral candidates and scholars who have already earned their PhD. Preference will be given to candidates examining comparative and/or cross-regional research. Applicants are eligible to apply as individuals or in teams. Scholars must carry out research in two or more countries outside the United States, at least one of which hosts a participating American overseas research center.” <<more>>

Sage Advice for Competitive Proposals

Colorado State University's "Principles of Effective Grantsmanship"

In early December we covered two blog posts in a series posted by Colorado State University's Tricia Callahan, the Senior Research Education and Information Officer. "Finding the Right Opportunity" and "Planning for Success" offered tips on laying the groundwork for a competitive and effective proposal. Callahan's fifth in the series, "Write and Rewrite," gets to the core of applying for funding, whether or not it requires the greatest allocation of time. Callahan lays out some "General Rules:"

"Leave plenty of time for review and revision....

Don't be vague in your language....

Avoid jargon and write in short, clear sentences....

Keep objectives to a minimum....

The novelty or distinctiveness of your project should be clearly explained....

Don't assume that your proposal's relevance to the grant program's goals is self-evident....

Understand your audience....

Understand the reviewer's challenge...."

If you are curious what I have ellipsed, you can find out here.

In addition to each of these pithy and wise directives, Callahan dissects the different parts of a proposal, beginning with the title, which, she says, should contain a verb (sadly, my title above does not). I suggest that verb not be any form of "to be."

The abstract, as you know, should be one-stop shopping for your reviewers. Therefore, Callahan suggests you "send your abstract to someone who is not familiar with the specifics of your work and ask if it explains the problem you are addressing, your hypothesis and the evidence to support it, your research plan, how this work is distinctive or novel, your unique qualifications, how the outcomes will benefit science and humanity, and how it serves the grant program's goals."

Of "Background, Research Plan, and Outcomes," Callahan says, "The underlying logic is just as important as the work you plan to do." "Ask yourself 'why?' or 'so what?' If your draft doesn't answer those questions, add further explanation."

To come up with an airtight budget, "work with your college/departmental proposal support staff in developing a budget that is appropriate to the scope of work proposed [and] in line with sponsor requirements." That's us! We await your call.

Don't forget the biographical sketches/vitae. Here Callahan uses the word, "pedigree."

If letters of support are requested as part of the proposal, it is of course incumbent on you to line up your recommenders early. It may also be in your best and expedient interest to offer your recommender an outline of some key bullet points you want covered or even a draft of a letter. While not everyone will take you up on the offer, many will appreciate the guidance.

Callahan cautions applicants not to "underestimate the amount of time and effort that will be needed to ensure that you have provided all required attachments and supplementary documents" and gather them early in the process, if possible.

Lastly, each request for proposals is different, so "don't neglect additional required parts of the application, like an education component or program assessment/evaluation."

SHUTDOWN NEWS

No doubt you've heard that, at least until February 15, federal funding agencies are open.

From the NSF

"After a long and difficult lapse in appropriations, the agency is operating under a three-week continuing resolution. This means we will not be able to conduct "business as usual," and we will have to set priorities for what to do first. We will start with the most pressing of issues, including processing the backlog of awards to universities and small businesses, rescheduling merit review panels that were cancelled, funding facilities and renewing oversight of those facilities, and funding graduate student and postdoctoral fellowships. In addition, we will advance the bold new agenda for science envisioned by NSF and the National Science Board, an agenda now being formulated in new solicitations. Our hardworking staff will be pressed to do more. We once again ask for your forbearance as we deal with this unprecedented situation. And we welcome good ideas for making rapid progress, whether they come through scientific organizations and societies or from individuals." <<more>>

"Unfortunately, the recent lapse in appropriations (lapse) resulted in missed panels, a backlog of proposal actions, and delays that may result in the cancelation of related activities and certain programs. It is fully recognized that it will take time to work through this extensive backlog of activities. The Foundation is establishing processes that will enable us to focus on a specific set of high-priority areas, particularly in light of the three-week CR.

Proposers, awardees and reviewers who have questions are encouraged to await communications from NSF, at least initially, as we resume operations. We appreciate your patience.

PROPOSAL PREPARATION & SUBMISSION

- The issuance of new funding opportunities (program descriptions, announcements or solicitations) and Dear Colleague Letters (DCLs) will resume in the coming days.
- The NSF FastLane system, Grants.gov and Research.gov were available for proposal preparation and submission during the lapse.

The implementation date for the revised NSF Proposal and Award Policies and Procedures Guide (PAPPG) (SF N19-1), which was scheduled to become effective on January 28, 2019, has been delayed. NSF will post a new implementation date on the NSF website as soon as practicable. In the interim, the current version of the PAPPG (NSF 18-1) applies.

Impact on Existing Due Dates

Guidance to the proposer and awardee community was updated on January 25, 2019, to specify that NSF will be extending the deadline date for the solicitations or Dear Colleague Letters (DCLs) listed in the table below. The table has now been updated to include any additional affected solicitations and DCLs, along with the revised deadlines. Deadlines for published program descriptions, announcements, solicitations and DCLs that do not appear on the list below remain unchanged. <<more>> (See table on page 5.)

Although this news is obsolete, we want to give props to the NEH for this banner seen on the homepage of their website on January 24:

"NEH REOPENS ON JANUARY 28, 2019

On Monday, January 28, the NEH will return to normal business operations for approximately four weeks. The agency will use FY18 administrative funds in order to end the furlough for staff and contractors. The agency will prioritize the grant review process in order to minimize any interruption in the awarding of federal funding. Reopening now coincides with the critical workload in mid-January through February that is necessary to award the spring grants."
