

Grant Opportunities & News You Can Use

Hello faculty,

Congratulations on wrapping up your first month of the semester! With the new season, we’ve brought a new twist to our newsletter so let’s jump right in.

This month we have a Featured Funder column featuring the Simons Foundation. Because we anticipate more news and updates on the future of AI in higher education, we are launching a new Sage Advice Series that aims to help you feel more prepared in making decisions about AI that respond to the many hats you may wear. Expect Sage Advice for navigating AI as an instructor, a researcher, a writer, and even as a social media user who wants to boil down your work to a broader audience. This month kicks us off with resources available as you make decisions about AI Generative Tools in the classroom. If you have any questions related to AI in Higher Education, we would love to hear from you by submitting ideas here! Please note that the History of American Philanthropy column is on hold until Li-ane’s return.

We have news stories and brief thumbnails of opportunities coming due in November. And in the back, we have six months’ worth of deadlines. (As always, check the website! Some of the later deadlines have not yet been released.) The 2023– 2024 internal grant deadlines are officially uploaded to the website. The next internal grant deadline is October 17, 2023 for Faculty Research Grants.

As always, we will have office hours on Zoom the first Friday of the month. Drop by Friday, October 6, any time from 10-11 to ask us questions, pitch a project, get advice on funding, or just say hi. You can find us here:

Featured Funder: Simons Foundation

The Simons Foundation has a history of providing sustained support for researchers committed to “unraveling the mysteries of the universe.” We’ve featured the Simons Foundation in our October, 2018 issue and focused on the various institutes hosted by the foundation, like the Flatiron Institute that hosts in-house research operations and the Simons Autism Research Institute (SFARI). We also highlighted different grant opportunities in their four distinct target areas: Mathematics & Physical Sciences, Life Sciences, Autism & Neuroscience, and Science, Society & Culture. Grants offered in each category remain very specific and we have highlighted a unique opportunity in each distinct category below, as well as links to learn more about opportunities in each field:

- ⇒ Mathematics & Physical Sciences: Scientific Software Research Faculty Award, deadline December 8, 2023
- ⇒ Life Sciences: Simons Early Career Investigator in Aquatic Microbial Ecology and Evolution Awards, deadline February 29, 2024
- ⇒ Autism and Neuroscience: SFARI Supplement to Enhance Equity and Diversity (SEED) — Request for Applications, open now and rolling deadline
- ⇒ Science, Society & Culture: Science Sandbox, invitation only

Many of the Simons foundations’ grants encourage scientists from underrepresented backgrounds to apply and the foundation leads with the principle that science requires a diversity of perspectives. The Simons Foundation has since expanded the ways it promotes diversity in science by funding both research and storytelling initiatives that promote the foundations’ values.

In addition to the invitation only Science, Society & Culture opportunity above, the Sandbox Fund also accepts unsolicited proposals. The program area “offers grants, mentorship, and other opportunities for independent artists seeking to explore the intrinsic link between science and culture through innovative storytelling. The program is administered by Sundance Institute Documentary Fund, in collaboration with Sandbox Films.” Nonfiction documentaries at any stage of the production process are eligible for up to $50,000. The Sandbox Fund prioritizes projects that highlight diversity in science and “specifically those that feature characters, topics, or disciplines that broaden and redefine what it means to be a scientist or to do science.” The Fund offers grants bi-annually for Fall and Spring cycles, with decisions occurring generally in the winter and summer. The Spring 2024 cycle deadline is to be announced and deadlines are announced generally 5 months in advance.

Sage Advice: Navigating AI Generative Tools in the Classroom

This semester, I am teaching a graduate-level Sociology of Education course at New York University. After the first week of assignments, I gave students an opportunity to share advice for managing heavy reading weeks in the course for their peers still adjusting to the level of reading required for graduate school. This semester, far more tips involved the use of Artificial Intelligence (AI), particularly Large Language Models (LLMs) that mimic human intelligence like ChatGPT. It was clear that, to students, LLMs were simply a tool to help them feel more prepared for class. It was also clear that I had not outlined nearly enough guidelines regarding the use of AI on assignments in the course.

Inside Higher Ed published an article about the lack of policies and guidelines shared in faculty syllabi. The article references a 2023 Primary Research Group survey of instructors on views and use of the AI writing tools that stresses faculty desires for more guidance around AI policies and best practices for their classrooms. Luckily, Barnard's Center for Engaged Pedagogy (CEP) has tackled faculty-related questions head-on and offers resources for making decisions about AI and coursework. We've threaded together resources from CEP and other sources that can help you make informed decisions about AI in your classroom as well:

- ⇒ The CEP interviewed faculty across Barnard and gathered their different approaches to navigating AI in the classroom. This Integrating Generative AI in Teaching and Learning resource shares insights on how faculty have reimagined their course assignments and policies. There is also an opportunity on the page for you to submit how you have reimagined yours!
- ⇒ The CEP has compiled one of the most comprehensive Generative AI and the College Classroom resource pages that we have come across in higher education for syllabi statements, infographics for making decisions about AI, reference lists, and frequently asked questions.
- ⇒ Classroom Policies for Generative AI Tools, created by Lance Eaton, is an open-source archive of language and policies from higher education for AI-Generative tools in the classroom. For a more searchable resource, check out the spreadsheet version as well. We don't know Lance personally, but we find it helpful (and so does the CEP).
- ⇒ Columbia University Center for Teaching & Learning also has a helpful Considerations for AI Tools in the Classroom resource guide. It is a good resource for understanding the basics of AI Generative tools and classroom use.
- ⇒ The Digital Futures Institute at Teachers College hosted an AI in the Classroom Interview Series. The series ranges in topics from how to interact with AI in a meaningful way to racialized experiences employing AI tools.

As AI Generative Tools have been a hot topic in higher education, we plan to research guidelines and policies as they continue to evolve both on Barnard's campus and on broader, national scales. Stay tuned for future Sage Advice columns on AI in Higher Education. If you have any burning questions or ideas related to the AI in Higher Education Sage Advice Series, we would love for you to share them here!

News

FROM THE NIH

Adjustments to NIH Policy for Subawards and Implementation

By NIH Staff, Posted September 20, 2023

“This summer, NIH announced planned changes to its policy on subawards—arrangements in which a grant recipient has another organization perform grant-supported research activities as part of the federal award. We previewed those plans in our June 21, 2023 article “Prepare for October Policy Changes on Subawards, Foreign Subrecipients.”

As explained in a September 15, 2023 Guide notice, NIH has since altered certain aspects of the planned policy changes and their implementation.

First, the policy changes will now go into effect on January 1, 2024, instead of October 1, 2023.

Second, NIH adjusted the stipulation enhancing grant recipient oversight of foreign subrecipients. Rather than a foreign subrecipient being required to provide copies of research materials at least every 3 months, foreign subrecipients will be required to provide access to copies of research materials no less than once per year. Animal Welfare Noncompliance: Data and Process

By Mike Lauer and Brent Morse, Posted August 17, 2023

“As part of proper stewardship of taxpayer funds, we at NIH are obligated, both legally and ethically, to ensure the welfare and reduce risks for those involved in our supported research activities. This obligation includes research animals. Their humane care and use is something we take very seriously. Today we are taking some time to touch upon our policies to protect animal welfare, discuss how we process reports of non-compliance, and provide resources to help recipients and researchers ensure their work involving animals is conducted appropriately.” <<more>>

Inviting Comments and Suggestions on Updating the NIH Mission Statement

By NIH Staff, Posted August 28, 2023

“NIH has issued a Request for Information (RFI) inviting feedback on a proposed update to the NIH mission statement, in response to recommendations from the Advisory Committee to the Director (ACD) Working Group on Diversity, Subgroup on Individuals with Disabilities.” <<more>>

NIH All About Grants Podcast: Reporting on Your Scientific Progress

By NIH Staff, Posted August 18, 2023

“Dr. Tom Cheever, a program officer with the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, explains more about the importance of reporting on your progress, what to report, how NIH staff use this information, and more in this episode of the NIH All About Grants podcast.” <<more>>

CHIPS and Science Act Fails to Meet Ambitious Funding Targets

By Katherine Knott, Inside Higher Ed, August 29, 2023

"The legislation, signed into law a year ago, promised a substantial financial investment in science at federal agencies, which universities could tap into. But with Congress' self-imposed financial constraints, additional funding is questionable." <<more>>

Community-based Research Can Help Solve Societal Problems But Remains Undervalued in Academe

By Karin Fischer, Chronicle of Higher Education, August 23, 2023

Fundamental research is seen as more serious than public scholarship in the academy. Yet community-oriented research could increase flagging public trust in universities. <<more>>

People with Disabilities Remain Underrepresented in Scientific Research and Face Challenges in the Field

By Sydney Trent, Washington Post, August 30, 2023

A researcher has sued Howard Hughes Medical Institute, claiming it terminated her funding because she is disabled. Scientists with disabilities also have complained about inequitable treatment in other situations. Data from NSF indicate that people with disabilities were the only group of underrepresented workers in STEM who didn't increase on a percentage basis between 2011 and 2020. <<more>>
