

Grant Opportunities & News You Can Use

Hello faculty,

Don't miss our News section this edition! It has instructions for signing up for Pivot, a subscription service that Columbia is making available to us for researching grant opportunities. This is the sort of thing that sends a twitter of excitement among us over here in Institutional Funding and Sponsored Research.

Also, see our myth-busting Feature on the Fulbright Scholars Program and some Sage Advice on why, when, and how to contact a funding agency program officer. As usual we profile opportunities due three or so months out—in this case, early January.

Beginning on page twelve, we list all deadlines through April, grouped by discipline.

Upcoming deadlines for INTERNAL grants are November 20th and January 31st. See the Barnard website, here, for more information.

For deadlines throughout the year, see the Grants Calendar, perpetually in progress, on the Barnard website at External Grant Opportunities. You can download a copy of your very own to sort, search, and filter at will.

Institutional Funding and Sponsored Research is now on Twitter! Follow or tag us at @BarnardIFSR. We're not big tweeters, but we hope to be prolific retweeters, especially of good news.

If you would like assistance in finding grants for an upcoming project or would like to begin an application process, please contact Kari Steeves. As always, feel free to send any comments, requests, or suggestions to us here.

Fulbright Scholar Program

As I'm sure you're aware, the Fulbright Scholar Program is among the most competitive and prestigious fellowships available—actually an exchange program administered by the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES) for the United States Department of State. It is meant to foster understanding and peaceful, friendly relations between the U.S. and other countries. CIES has published “Ten Myths About Fulbright,” in case you subscribe to some. An overarching theme is that a lot depends on the host country, including decidedly non-mythical deadlines. Open opportunities may be found here.

Myth 1: Fulbrights are only for senior faculty.

In fact, “many seek and accept a range of scholars, including adjunct faculty.” There are even Fulbright awards for non-academic professionals—artists, lawyers, journalists, musicians, filmmakers, scientists, and engineers.

Myth 2: Accepting a Fulbright means leaving your family behind.

Some countries provide maintenance, travel funds, and sometimes even tuition allowances for dependents.

Myth 3: A Fulbright Scholar award provides little benefit to the scholar's home institution.

“Nearly three quarters of returning scholars have initiated educational exchange between home and host institutions and incorporated aspects of the Fulbright experience into courses and teaching methods.”

Myth 4: Only faculty from large universities are awarded Fulbrights.

“currently the program is mounting special outreach efforts to attract more applicants from liberal arts colleges, community colleges and minority-serving institutions.”

Myth 5: Fulbrights are only for research.

“Just 24 percent of Fulbright Scholar awards are for research only. Most Fulbrights are for lecturing or combined lecturing and research.”

Myth 6: You have to speak a foreign language fluently in order to apply.

Actually, most grants require English, especially lecturing grants. Of course, the particulars of your research may hinge upon knowing another language.

Myth 7 Fulbright grants require an invitation from a host institution overseas.

While this may be true for some countries, “CIES, in collaboration with overseas Fulbright Commissions and Public Affairs Sections at U.S. embassies, can help you make connections with possible host institutions, if the country requires it.”

Myth 8: Fulbright awards are all for one academic year.

In general, awards cover as little as two months and as much as a year. Sometimes Fulbrights can be extended longer than a year.

Myth 9: You have to be on sabbatical to afford a Fulbright Scholar award.

“It is possible,” says CIES, “to live comfortably on stipends for a number of the grants offered.”

Myth 10: Applying for a Fulbright is a time-consuming, grueling exercise.

CIES promises they are “streamlin[ing] our online application” so that it is no more strenuous than “most grant programs.” CIES hosts webinars regularly to walk applicants through the process. You can find upcoming and previously recorded webinars on their website.

Sage Advice for Competitive Proposals

“Contact Your Program Officer!”

These words seem to constitute something of a mantra at the conferences and webinars this newsletter writer has attended. So let’s look at why, what, when, and how to contact a program officer, reaped from pages 47-51 of the handy, “New Faculty Guide, 2nd Edition” published by Columbia’s Faculty of Arts and Sciences. It’s certainly a good idea, authors Mike Cronan and Lucy Deckard say, if:

- (1) “there is a point of ambiguity in the solicitation that you need to clarify;
- (2) you need to determine whether your project is appropriate for the funding agency or program and perhaps solicit advice on how best to present your idea; or
- (3) you need to get to know the Program Officer and s/he needs to get to know you.”

Number 2 can be particularly meaningful when “submitting to the wrong program can doom a good proposal.” At the NSF, where there are a dizzying array of programs and where program officers “see themselves as mentors to early career researchers,” it might seem anomalous NOT to have at least one conversation with your program officer.

Keep in mind that program officers “may have very little influence on the funding decision,” (such as at the NIH) or they “may have almost sole control over which proposals get funded.” At “mission agencies” such as NASA, NOAA, NIST, and the Department of Defense, program officers “see externally-funded researchers as collaborators helping them to meet the needs of their agency and program. For that reason, you need to develop an understanding of their needs” and make sure they know you, your work, and how it can further their mission. Likewise, at small private foundations, POs can have substantial influence on the selection process, beginning with which proposals are actually seen by the foundation’s founders or leaders.

Also consider that the freedom and ability of program officers to talk with applicants varies widely between funding agencies. And they travel a lot. It’s best to reach out first via “email with a short summary of your research idea and ask to schedule a phone conversation.” Wait a week or so before you try again. If the first couple emails aren’t fruitful, try leaving a voice mail.

When you do have an opportunity for a real conversation, make sure you come prepared by reading the RFP thoroughly and looking into what other projects have been funded under the program. Cronan and Deckard advise grant seekers to “take what the program officer has to say seriously, even if what she’s telling you is not what you want to hear. For example, if the program officer says your research doesn’t fit his program, it’s much better to accept that fact and talk to him about other programs where it might fit or how your research project could be modified rather than spend time on a proposal that’s unlikely to succeed.” Cronan and Deckard warn, in boldface type, “do not ask the program officer to make speculative comments on the likelihood that your idea will be funded, or to engage in similarly inappropriate discussions.”

Underlying these answers lies a maxim the authors also print in bold: “Timidity is never rewarded in the grants process, and ambiguities are always punished.” The takeaway? Cast off timidity and clear up ambiguity with a call to your program officer.

Columbia is Offering All of Us a New Grants Search Tool

Register for a Pivot account through Columbia

From Stephanie Scott of CU Sponsored Projects Administration (SPA)

Last month the Augustus C. Long Health Sciences Library (HSL) and SPA announced the availability of a new tool called Pivot, which provides immediate access to funding opportunities targeted for you. Start using Pivot at: <https://pivot.cos.com/>.

To get the most out of Pivot, users should:

- Create a Pivot Account, using your Columbia University email address. (A Pivot PowerPoint training presentation showing you how to create an account and claim your profile can be found on the Barnard website here. Don't make the mistake this newsletter writer did of creating your Pivot account BEFORE you set up forwarding of your CU email address.)
- After creating an account, claim and update your profile. Keeping your profile up to date enables better funding opportunity matching.
- Search, save and share funding searches. Having a Pivot account allows you to save your searches and create email alerts of new opportunities in your area of interest.
- Collaborate with others. You can search for potential collaborators within Columbia University, or outside the institution, by conducting a profile search.
- Take advantage of the training videos and other training materials offered by Pivot.

HSL and SPA are currently working on a schedule of speaking events to demonstrate Pivot in the coming months. Stay tuned for more information. If you have questions, please feel free to reach us via HSL.

From the National Science Foundation – Biologists irate at NSF's new one-proposal cap

“The National Science Foundation (NSF) in Alexandria, Virginia, has made several tweaks to its grant proposal policies in recent years to keep staff and reviewers from being overwhelmed by the rising number of submissions. But some biologists say the latest change goes too far.

Last month, NSF's biology directorate announced that researchers could submit only one proposal a year in which they are listed as a principal investigator (PI) or co-PI. The cap applies only to the directorate's three core tracks and excludes several other NSF programs from which many biologists receive support.”

If you have questions about this new policies for the Directorate of Biological Sciences, please see the FAQs.

NSF Funding: You may know RUI, but have you met ROA?

“RUI proposals support PUI faculty in research that engages them in their professional field(s), builds capacity for research at their home institution, and supports the integration of research and undergraduate education. ROAs similarly support PUI faculty research, but these awards typically allow faculty to work as visiting scientists at research-intensive organizations where they collaborate with other NSF-supported investigators.

Research Opportunity Awards (ROA). The types of ROA opportunities include:

- A supplement to an existing NSF award to support ROA activities for PUI faculty.
- Requests to rebudget funds in an existing NSF award to support ROA activities for PUI faculty.
- Submission of a new collaborative proposal between a PUI and another institution(s), with a ROA component as a subaward or as part of a linked collaborative proposal.

Prospective PIs should contact disciplinary program officers to identify specific NSF programs and to determine the feasibility and timing of RUI/ROA requests. General RUI/ROA points of contact are available through the website http://www.nsf.gov/crssprgm/rui_roa/contacts.jsp.”

Grant Opportunities

Harvard College Library Visiting Fellowships

Deadline: January 14, 2019

"Houghton Library is pleased to offer short-term visiting fellowships to assist scholars with the cost of travel and accommodation to come and pursue their research at the library. The collections of Houghton Library touch upon almost every aspect of the human record, particularly the history and culture of Europe and North America, and include special concentrations in the history of printing and of theater. Materials held here range from medieval manuscripts and early printed books to the working papers of living writers. Fellows will also have access to collections in Widener Library as well as to other libraries at the University. Preference is given to scholars whose research is closely based on materials in Houghton collections, especially when those materials are unique; and we particularly welcome proposals for research projects drawing on our holdings related to Africa, the Americas, Asia, and Oceania, and to histories of marginalized people; fellowships are normally not granted to scholars who live within commuting distance of the library. Each fellow is expected to be in residence at Houghton for at least four weeks." <<more>>

Women's Caucus Editing and Translation Fellowship

Deadline: January 15, 2019

"The ASECS Women's Caucus Editing and Translation Fellowship, is an annual award of $1000 to support an editing or a translation work in progress of an eighteenth-century primary text on a feminist or a Women's Studies subject. Editing and translation work of eighteenth-century texts in languages other than English are eligible. The award is open to all members of ASECS who have received a PhD. Proposals from Emeritae/i faculty that do not already have professional support for the project will also be considered. The award is meant to fund works in progress, commensurate in scope with a scholarly article-length project to a longer scholarly and/or a classroom edition with a strong scholarly basis for which research and work is well under way, rather than work that is already completed. To be eligible for the prize, projects must translate and/or edit works by eighteenth-century women writers or works that significantly advance our understanding of women's experiences in the eighteenth century or offer a feminist analysis of any aspect of eighteenth-century culture and/or society. Projects typically fall within the period from 1660 to 1820." <<more>>

SOCIAL SCIENCE

National Science Foundation

Law and Social Science

Deadline: January 1, 2019

"The Law & Social Sciences Program considers proposals that address social scientific studies of law and law-like systems of rules. The Program is inherently interdisciplinary and multi-methodological. Successful proposals describe research that advances scientific theory and understanding of the connections between law or legal processes and human behavior. Social scientific studies of law often approach law as dynamic, made in multiple arenas, with the participation of multiple actors. Fields of study include many disciplines, and often address problems including though not limited to: Crime, Violence and Punishment, Economic Issues, Governance, Legal Decision Making, Legal Mobilization and Conceptions of Justice, and Litigation and the Legal Profession." <<more>>

Cultural Anthropology Senior Research Awards

Deadline: January 1, 2019

"The primary objective of the Cultural Anthropology Program is to support fundamental, systematic anthropological research and training to increase understanding of the causes, consequences, and complexities of human social and cultural variability. The Cultural Anthropology Program welcomes proposals from researchers in all sub-fields of cultural anthropology and research at any temporal and spatial scale. Methodologies and approaches employed may include ethnographic field research, surveys, remote sensing, the collection of bio-markers, experimental research inside or outside of laboratory settings, archival research, the analysis of materials collections and extant data bases, mathematical and computational modeling, and other research tools as appropriate for the research proposed. The overarching research goals should be to produce empirically grounded findings that will be generalizable beyond particular case studies and contribute to building a more robust anthropological science of human society and culture." <<more>>

American Classical League Scholarships

"ACL members at all levels of teaching are eligible to apply. Must be a member of ACL for at least 3 consecutive years, including this current year and the two preceding years. ACL scholarship recipients may apply every 4 years" "Funded Activities: registration, room, board and travel for attendance at ACL Institute; purchase of materials from the ACL Teaching Materials and Resource Center; Expenses connected with enrollment in classes required for Latin Certification; Bona fide summer study programs at home or abroad" <<more>>

National Science Foundation Linguistics

Deadline: January 15, 2019

"The Linguistics Program supports basic science in the domain of human language, encompassing investigations of the grammatical properties of individual human languages, and of natural language in general. Research areas include syntax, semantics, morphology, phonetics, and phonology. The program encourages projects that are interdisciplinary in methodological or theoretical perspective, and that address questions that cross disciplinary boundaries, such as (but not limited to): What are the psychological processes involved in the production, perception, and comprehension of language? What are the computational properties of language and/or the language processor that make fluent production, incremental comprehension or rapid learning possible? How do the acoustic and physiological properties of speech inform our theories of natural language and/or language processing? What role does human neurobiology play in shaping the various grammatical properties of language? How does language develop in children? What social and cultural factors underlie language variation and change?" <<more>>

National Speleological Society International Exploration Grants

Deadline: January 1, 2019

"National Speleological Society International Exploration Grants foster and encourage the work of NSS cavers in cave exploration, survey, photography and research projects around the world. Grants are given in support of group equipment for expeditions outside of the United States and its territories. Grants have varied between $200 and $1500 in past ten years and have supported caving on 6 continents by dozens of US cavers. Projects have included work in Mexico, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Egypt, Borneo, Chile, Nepal, China, and many more countries. As few as three and as many as twelve grants have been given in a single year. Overall since 2008 more than $55,000 has been granted for nearly 70 expeditions in 25 countries."

American Psychological Association Congressional Fellowship Program

Deadline: January 6, 2019

"The purpose of this fellowship is to provide psychologists with an invaluable public policy learning experience, to contribute to the more effective use of psychological knowledge in government and to broaden awareness about the value of psychology-government interaction among psychologists and within the federal government. Fellows spend one year working on the staff of a member of Congress or congressional committee. Activities may involve drafting legislation, conducting oversight work, assisting with congressional hearings and events, and preparing briefs and speeches. Fellows also attend a two-week orientation program on congressional and executive branch operations, which provides guidance for the congressional placement process, and participate in a yearlong seminar series on science and public policy issues. The American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) administers these professional development activities for the APA fellows and for fellows sponsored by over two dozen other professional societies." <<more>>

McKnight Foundation Scholars Award

Deadline: January 7, 2019

"The McKnight Endowment Fund for Neuroscience supports innovative research designed to bring science closer to the day when diseases of the brain can be accurately diagnosed, prevented, and treated. To this end, the McKnight Endowment Fund for Neuroscience invites applications for the 2018 McKnight Scholar Awards.

Background: These awards were established to encourage emerging neuroscientists to focus on disorders of learning and memory. Applicants for the McKnight Scholar Award must demonstrate interest in solving important problems in relevant areas of neuroscience, including the translation of basic research to clinical neuroscience. Awards are given to exceptional young scientists who hold the M.D. and/or Ph.D. degree and who are in the early stages of establishing an independent laboratory and research career. Traditionally, successful candidates have held faculty positions for at least one year.” <<more>>

American Physical Society Congressional Science Fellowships

Deadline: January 15, 2019

"Fellowships are for one year, usually running September through August. Following a two-week orientation in Washington sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, incoming Congressional Fellows become acquainted with most aspects of their future work environment. Following interviews on the Hill, Fellows choose a congressional office — personal or committee staff — where they wish to serve. Fellows are expected to be capable of handling varied assignments, both technical and non-technical.

The Program's popularity with Members of Congress continues to grow. Typically, 150-200 congressional offices express interest in the 200-300 fellows who participate in the AAAS fellowship program. Former fellows express enthusiasm in their evaluations, and many elect to stay in the public policy arena; it is not unusual to find former fellows in influential positions in Washington." <<more>>

Cattell Fund Fellowships

Deadline: January 15, 2019

"For over half a century, the James McKeen Cattell Fund has provided support for the science and the application of psychology. The Fund offers a program of supplementary sabbatical awards. National Science Foundation Research on the Science and Technology Enterprise: Statistics and Surveys

Deadline: January 15, 2019

"The Center would like to enhance its efforts to support analytic and methodological research in support of its surveys, and to engage in the education and training of researchers in the use of large-scale nationally representative datasets. NCSES welcomes efforts by the research community to use NCSES data for research on the science and technology enterprise, to develop improved survey methodologies for NCSES surveys, to create and improve indicators of S&T activities and resources, and strengthen methodologies to analyze and disseminate S&T statistical data. To that end, NCSES invites proposals for individual or multi-investigator research projects, doctoral dissertation improvement awards, workshops, experimental research, survey research and data collection and dissemination projects under its program for Research on the Science and Technology Enterprise: Statistics and Surveys." <<more>>

National Science Foundation Developmental Science

Deadline: January 15, 2019

"Supports research that addresses developmental processes within the domains of cognitive, social, emotional, and motor development across the lifespan by working with any appropriate populations for the topics of interest including infants, children, adolescents, adults, and non-human animals. The program also supports research investigating factors that affect developmental change including family, peers, school, community, culture, media, physical, genetic, and epigenetic influences. Additional priorities include research that: incorporates multidisciplinary, multi-method, microgenetic, and longitudinal approaches; develops new methods, models, and theories for studying development; includes participants from a range of ethnicities, socioeconomic backgrounds, and cultures; and integrates different processes (e.g., memory, emotion, perception, cognition), levels of analysis (e.g., behavioral, social, neural), and time scales." <<more>>

National Science Foundation Energy, Power, Control, and Networks

Deadline: Rolling

"The Energy, Power, Control, and Networks

(EPCN) Program supports innovative research in modeling, optimization, learning, adaptation, and control of networked multi-agent systems, higher-level decision making, and dynamic resource allocation, as well as risk management in the presence of uncertainty, sub-system failures, and stochastic disturbances. EPCN also invests in novel machine learning algorithms and analysis, adaptive dynamic programming, brain-like networked architectures performing real-time learning, and neuromorphic engineering. EPCN's goal is to encourage research on emerging technologies and applications including energy, transportation, robotics, and biomedical devices & systems. EPCN also emphasizes electric power systems, including generation, transmission, storage, and integration of renewable energy sources into the grid; power electronics and drives; battery management systems; hybrid and electric vehicles; and understanding of the interplay of power systems with associated regulatory & economic structures and with consumer behavior." <<more>>
